We believe they have a much greater desire to overthrow the democracy than to ameliorate the condition of the country; and whilst they are bold in their protestations against the administration of the democratic policy, they concell a thirst and desire for political place, which they would grasp at the cost of the broken and shattered bonds of the Union.

CITY INTELLIGENCE.

ADDRESS ON THE CONDITION OF THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS We are indebted to Mayor Berret, ex officio president of the Board of Trustees of the Public Schools, for an early copy of the address to the citizens of Washington adopted by the board, and soon to be generally circulated. It is an able document, and can but succeed in awakening "a spirit of generous co-operation and active sympathy with the cause of public education" that must lead to some prompt measures for its present relief and future advance-ment. "How this can most effectually be done," says the address," is the grave and important question which presents itself for consideration, and which every good citizen is now called upon to investigate and to solve. The extension of the system so as to embrace all the advanta-ges of our city's position as the sent of the general government; the pressing necessity for greater accommodation; the want of a superintendent of public instruction; and, bove all, the wretched condition of nearly all of our put school rooms, absolutely demand the most prompt and ergetic action."

amounts appropriated for educational purposes in other cities, and repeats the lamentable truth shown in the momental presented to Congress at its last session, viz:

"The number of children (in the city of Washington "The number of children (in the city of Washington) between the ages of five and eighteen, is ten thousand six bundred and ninety-eecn.

"Three thousand three hundred and twenty-eight of this number are in private schools.

"The thousand of our hundred are in public schools.

"Five thousand and sixty-nine are in no schools at all!

"The public schools cannot accommodate twenty-five per cent. of the number of children of the city."

The address urges the immediate erection of suitable buildings, in appropriate localities, capable of accommo-dating all of these children, and the trustees say in conclusion:

"The manner of raising the revenue necessary for the crection of suitable buildings is a matter for public thought and discussion: and the board of trustees simply oresent the subject for that purpose, with the suggestion that the question be discussed in ward or other meetings, in order that some general plan may be adopted to secure the end in view. One branch of the national legislature has already passed a bill of relief, and there is every reason to hope for its success before the other; but, unless seconded by our own united and earnest efforts, the benefits accruing to us from the final passage of this bill will be but partial; in calling upon Hercules for assistance, we should first put our own shoulder to the wheel.

"In presenting this address to their fellow-citizens, the Trustees are actuated solely by a sense of their official responsibilities as guardians of the interests of the public schools. They feel that it is indispensable at this time to urge upon their fellow-citizens the necessity for some prompt action in behalf of the cause of jublic instruction, and they seek to arouse them to a just appreciation of its advantages, and to induce them to take a greater interest in its objects."

atre on Saturd y. The New York Sunday Tones says of him:

"Mr. Sullivan is a fine, intellectual actor. He has the boldness to mark out a course for himself, instead of following the beaten track of his predecessors. He has studied Shakspeare with scholarly devotion, and been governed by his own judgment instead of adopting the ideas of others. Consequently, there is a freakness and originality in his efforts which invest them with peculiar interest; he never fails to arouse the attention of his auditors, and to gratify them by the highly artistic manner in which everything is accomplished. His performance of Hamlet was replete with beautics, and there were many points of exceeding excellence. His scene with the ghost was deeply impressive, and the closet scene with the Queen we have never seen more powerfully rendered. In Macbeth, too, he was sometimes truly great. He never descends to mediciority, and in the collequial part particularly, his perfect naturalness is in itself a most effective point. He is, in fact, a natural actor. There is an evident motive for everything he does. He acts in such a way as to satisfy his own judgment, and carefully avoids every species of claptrap, and never begs for appliause."

THE WASHINGTON CHILDREN'S MISSION

THE LADIES of the First Unitarian Church,

THE LADIES of the First Unitarian Church, moved by the sad condition of a large number of nor children in Washington, have commenced a mission, the object of which is to rescue from the streets and alleys of the worst neighborhoods as using as possible of that number who, either by the misfortane, guilt, or negligence of their parents, or Lorn causes incident to the language consists of their parents, or Lorn causes incident to the language consists of their parents and cities.

They have rented and furnished suitable rooms in the Fourth ward, employed at teacher, and are daily receiving children, who, coming from abodes of poverty, and often worse than poverty, by being surrounded during the day with a Christian stimosphere of kindness and forbearance, and being taught the common elementary branches of education, will be sayed from great peril, and some of them, it is hoped, become very webut men and women.

Very frequentry it is found necessary to supply shoes or other essential garments, and if the means could be obtained it would be desirable to furnish one plain, but sufficient men jew dien during he approaching water. Being constantly under our supervision—except at night—the chances for imposition are very much bessened; it is certain, moreover, that mothing can be wated which gives to children the power to read the Bible and the constitution, or feels and warms them, even though their parents should prove unworthy.

We submit the following considerations to the benevolent:

power to read the Bibbs and the constitution, or feels and surms them, even though their parents abould prove unworthy. We submit the following considerations to the benevolent:

That it is the duity of all good Christians and all good chirena to take good care of the young, because nothing can be more dangerous in a republic than the presence of lawless bands of youths;

That there is not, subticint public echool accommodation for the poor children of Washington- a fact too notorious to need demonstration. And, if there were, still the same necessity would exist be usually those from danger who, from the poverity or neglect of their parents, would not self-educational advantages;

That it is only by direct effort among the poor, by personal appeal to them, and personal saccinities for them that we can hope to clear owing our accomplish, this great purpose is fully evidenced in the past and present condition of "The live Points" in New York.

We have no bestitation, therefore, in asking pecuniary and from all persons disposed to help what seems to us to be so good a mission. We pledge currectives to the observance of a right conomy, and conference to the secretaries, clerks, agents, &c.

Donations will be thankfully received by the treasurer, Mrs. J. F. Webb, No. 4 Louisiana ayenue.
